

Australian National Burn Register set to launch

Australia's first National Burns Register will be launched on October 2 with the support of the Australian and New Zealand Burn Association, The Julian Burton Burns Trust and Burnaid. The register will enable more accurate planning of the provision of healthcare for burn injury patients and will provide medical staff and research teams with greater understanding of prevention, education, first-aid and long-term treatment choices.

Monday, September 22, 2008